DESCRIPTION

Program outcomes include collecting, analyzing and interpreting data on economic and fashion trends, consumer demographics, buying habits, tastes and preferences, as well as market size, penetration and competitors as they relate to specific target clientele and fashion products or services from a globally competitive perspective.

Most people who apply to a fashion program have a passionate lifelong interest in fashion. A flair for fashion and good business sense are necessary ingredients for success in the field of Fashion Marketing. Applicants may come directly from high school, transfer from other Kwantlen programs or other institutions, be mature individuals seeking a profession or making a career change, and retail sector personnel seeking upgrading. Applicants need to understand that a fashion marketing program requires extensive research, thinking, writing, computation and digital technology skills.

Fashion as a discipline is by its very nature connected with and impacted by culture and society. Therefore, emerging fashion marketers must be conversant with cultural and societal issues. Sustainable fashion and textiles are recurring themes throughout the fashion marketing diploma program courses as is awareness of the world through constant study of current events. Leadership and volunteer activities within the program play a role in the development of leaders and contributors to the world.

If seeking a business degree, Fashion Marketing Diploma program graduates may ladder directly to Kwantlen's third year of the Bachelor of Business Administration program (B.B.A.) based on taking the required bridging courses as electives. If bridging courses are not completed within the Diploma program, they may be taken prior to entry to the B.B.A. If seeking a General Studies degree, Fashion Marketing students will need to consult with the B.A. advisor and should do so early in the program to determine appropriate electives. Direct laddering to a B.A. is not possible and therefore more bridging courses will be required upon completion of the Fashion Marketing Diploma.

CAREER OPPORTUNITIES

Graduates can work for small, medium and large apparel companies (such as lululemon, Aritzia, Gentle Fawn, Arson/

Orb, Flosport, and Bootlegger), apparel distributors, marketing companies and retail (management), as well as work freelance or run a service-oriented entrepreneurship. Career opportunities are extensive and can be singular or include any combination of the following: Buying, Merchandising, Visual Merchandising, Branding, Communication, Forecasting, Styling, Special Events Coordination, Retail sales, Store Management, Fashion Consulting, Catalogue Manager, Managing Marketing Strategies to name a few. This field allows for developing a wide range of creative business services.

CONTENT

The Diploma program requires a minimum of 60 credits of post-secondary courses. The structure of the program will allow for a combination of full-time, part-time, day, evening, online and mixed-mode studies.

The program consists of 50% Fashion Marketing courses and 50% courses from the School of Business. As students will be taking courses from a variety of Kwantlen program areas such as Marketing (MRKT), Business (BUSI), Accounting (ACCT) and Economics (ECON), they will be able to get a head start if so desired by taking many of the non-fashion courses at any time during the year as a General Studies student. Kwantlen Fashion Marketing Certificate, Fashion & Technology, Marketing students, graduates and transfers from other institutions may enter the program at any stage, provided they meet the program's admission requirements. Some limitations may apply due to prerequisites and availability of courses.

In order to continue each semester as a fashion marketing diploma student and maintain priority registration status, students are required to take all of the Fashion Marketing (FMRK) courses offered each semester.

All FMRK courses are available on the Richmond Campus and available only in either the fall or spring semester as listed in the "Course Requirements" section.

Most required non-fashion and elective courses are available on all campuses, every semester, including summer session, and at a variety of times during the day and week. Some elective courses may only be available on the Surrey Campus.
